

Peter Borsch

Peter was born in Germany in 1961 and describes himself as a European. He started scuba diving in 1995 and went through the CMAS training to become a ‹Two Star Instructor›.

His interest in biology and the unique underwater experiences led him to capture them photographically, starting with a Nikonos 5.

In 2014, he successfully started competition photography and has been a member of the national visual media squad of the German Underwater Federation (VDST) ever since.

He has participated in international competitions from 2016 until today. In almost 11 years of competition photography, there have been both successes and failures. That's how you develop.

He is happy about every successful photo in live competitions, no matter which participant from which country took it.
